

Climate change - new challenges for humanitarian aid and health systems

Photo from ifmnews.org

5 March 2009, 1 pm - 3.30 pm

Venue:

University of Copenhagen
Main Building
Frue Plads
Room HO10
Copenhagen City Campus

Organised by:

- Copenhagen School of Global Health
- Danish Society for Tropical Medicine & International Health
- ENRECA Health - Danish Research Network for International Health
- Master in International Health
- Master of Disaster Management

Programme

- 1.00 pm – 1.10 pm Welcome by Britt Pinkowsky Tersbøl, Dept of International Health, Immunology and Microbiology, University of Copenhagen
- 1.10 pm – 1.30 pm Climate change is here: Challenges and practical examples on risk reduction and climate change adaptation
by Knud Falk, Disaster Preparedness Adviser, Danish Red Cross
- 1.45 pm – 2.05 pm Hunger, health and humanitarian responses - from programmes and policies to awareness and advocacy
by Christian Friis Bach, International Director, DanChurchAid
- 2.15 pm – 2.45 pm Coffee break
- 2.45 pm – 3.15 pm Keynote speech by Francesca Racioppi, European Centre for Environment and Health, WHO

Participants

Bachelor and Masters students from Public Health, International Health and Disaster Management, participants in the Danish Research Network for International Health, researchers, consultants, NGO representatives, Danida representatives, politicians, funders, and other interested professionals.

Registration

Kindly indicate your participation before 2 March 2009 by sending an e-mail to Jennifer Thorlaksen, jlt@sund.ku.dk, tel. 35 32 67 86

Please visit www.globalhealth.ku.dk/open_lectures