

Subject: Seminar on matchmaking between the labour market and recently graduated Master students within the field of development work. Master students within the field of development work.

Dear students, graduates and interested within development studies,

There is often a gap in the labour market within development studies between newly graduates in development studies and development organisations.

The Danish Development Research Network (DDRN) has approved and is financing the organization of a seminar entitled “Matchmaking between the labour market and recently graduated Master students within the field of development work”. The aim of the seminar is to discuss and debate how to begin a career in the development sector. The seminar is a corporation between Faculty of Life Sciences (KU), CBS, Centre for African Studies, Department of Geography and Geology (KU), RUC, and Faculty of Social Sciences (KU).

Representatives from both small and big development organizations in Denmark will participate in the seminar. The seminar will take place on Thursday the 24th of September at the Faculty of Life Sciences, Thorvaldsensvej 40, 1871 Frederiksberg, Auditorium 3-14 from 13 to 16.

The program will be:

- 13.00-13.15. Welcome and opening of the seminar. Presentation of the different study programs participating in the seminar.
- 13.15-13.45. Presentation of the participating organisations (each of the representatives tell shortly about their organisation).
- 13.45-15.00. Debate
- 15.00-16.00. Coffee break with space for networking and discussion between students and organizations.

Please sign up no later than 21st of September by sending an email to Marc Dumas-Johansen marc.d-j@hotmail.com with your name and institution as there are only 144 available seats in the auditorium.

Yours sincerely

The seminar organizers, Faculty of Life Sciences, KU.
